FILM AND COLONIALISM
21:510:314, sec. 63 (20631) (Spring 2015)

This course uses movies to examine the history of how Europeans and American thought about the colonies they possessed and the people under their rule. Films were many people’s main – or only – source of information about this subject, and although for years films mostly justified, romanticized, or mythologized colonial rule, they also criticized colonialism and racism more and more over time. Colonial relationships existed overseas but also at home, for example, with American Indians, and this course examines that “internal colonialism” as well.

Students are required to complete each evening’s readings and assigned film before class. In addition to learning about the subject, students will develop skills in areas such as critical thinking, writing, oral communication, reading comprehension and retention, and the analysis of fiction films.

The readings are all in a course reader, available only at PortaPrint, 33 Halsey St., 973 622-1828.

GRADING
TESTS: There will be a midterm on Thu. Mar. 12 and a COMPREHENSIVE final exam on Fri. May 8, 6:20-9:20pm. These tests will involve a series of short essays. Please read the exam instructions (in the reader) very carefully before each exam. All students must sign the Rutgers Honor Code Pledge.

LECTURE QUESTIONS: Each evening consists of two sessions, separated by a break. At the end of each session, you must hand in one or two brief questions or comments on the material in the lecture. Grades are based on the number of sessions when you attend and hand in a card; each unexcused absence will lower this score by five points. To receive credit, your card must contain a relevant question or comment. For an absence to be excused, you must provide written evidence of a valid reason, and you must turn in all excuses by the end of the final exam. Your overall course grade will fall by a half-letter (e.g., from B to C+) for each unexcused absence starting with the fourth one. Any student who misses eight or more sessions (or four full evenings) through any combination of excused and unexcused absences will not earn credit in this course; such students should withdraw from the class.

CLASS PARTICIPATION: Everyone is required to pay attention and to speak regularly in class, either asking questions or making relevant comments. Grading is based on how often you participate and on your level of comprehension of the readings and films. You will get separate scores for the two halves of the semester, and your final score will be an average of the two. Any disruptions of class or use of electronic devices (texting, etc.) in class will lower your score. Laptops are not allowed in this class.

QUIZZES: Several times during the semester, you will be quizzed on the readings and/or films assigned for that day. These quizzes will be unannounced. The lowest grade on the quizzes will not count.

PAPER: Students will write a 3-to-5 page scene-analysis paper. See separate instructions.
