Course description:
In this course we will survey the development of western Society from the Ancient Greeks to the eighteenth century Enlightenment. This story includes lots of facts, people, places, events and dates. We will focus on the process of history, on making connections, on understanding how the many pieces of history - the people, places, events and dates - fit together. We will develop tools for interpreting - why things happened the way they did in the context of the broad themes of intellectual, cultural, political, diplomatic, and socio-economic history.

Learning objectives and outcomes

To enable students to learn how the broad historical narrative is constructed from the interplay of events, ideas, discoveries, inventions, etc., we will work with selected primary and secondary source documents. For each source reading, students must prepare a guided written response focusing on interpretation, comparison and context for that material. These responses serve as the basis for class discussion in which, students must present their arguments, evidence and assumptions about the assigned readings. Through discussion, preparation (and submission) of responses and two short independent papers, students will develop/expand critical analytic and writing skills. Today is the accumulation of everything that has gone before, and tomorrow will be the result of that accumulation. By understanding our past stories we hope to understand the values and institutions that have shaped Western Civilization and better manage its future.

Expectations

Class discussion is an essential part of interpreting our course materials, and everyone’s input is important, so attendance is required. We have only 28 scheduled class meetings, therefore I will start taking one points off your grade for each absence after the 4th unexcused absence. Note: any student who misses eight or more sessions through any combination of excused and unexcused absences will not earn credit in this class. Such students should withdraw to avoid getting an F. You can always reach me by e-mail in unexpected cases of emergency.

Class reading assignments, papers & tests: You are responsible for having copies of all assigned readings in class; those without readings will be marked absent. You are responsible for getting all assignments and submitting all work on the due date whether or not you are in class when the assignment was announced and whether or not you are in class when the assignment is due. Work can be emailed to me or left in my department. All materials are posted on Blackboard and listed on the syllabus schedule. You are responsible for checking Blackboard for materials and for announcements about assignments and tests.
If you are having difficulty getting access to Blackboard check with the help desk at the computer Center, 3rd floor, Englehart Hall (973)353-5083 M-F

Respect: we each bring important resources and experiences into the class. As we each want our own ideas to be heard and respected, so, too, we must be willing to listen to others. This is the basis for classroom manners. Cell phones, beepers, distracting activities all interfere in learning. Please honor your fellow students' interests and your own commitment to college work.

Plagiarism: each of you has committed to college with money and time in order to develop your own understanding and ability. Any time you plagiarize and claim somebody else's work as your own, no matter how small the part, you have wasted some of your money and lost an opportunity for your own growth. You insult your own potential, you insult me, you insult your fellow students and their honest efforts. To be sure everyone is clear about exactly what plagiarism includes, the history department requires that all students write and sign the following honor pledge on examinations and major course assignments submitted for grading: On my honor, I have neither received nor given any unauthorized assistance on this examination (assignment).

Grading evaluation

Grades will be based on the number of points accumulated in a series of announced and unannounced quizzes, mid-term and final exams, two written projects- a museum project and a book report, and submission of reading responses*. Because the exams will include assigned readings as well as information presented in class, regular class attendance is essential in order to have all the necessary material.

Your final grade will be based on the total number of points you accumulate on a series of exams and exercises. ...

*Reading responses: The reading responses are to provide guidance for the document and source course readings. I expect you to fill them out and submit them and they will be logged in and posted in your cumulative grade record on Blackboard. You will not receive grade points for the responses, but at the end of the semester I will subtract points relative to the number of missing responses. It will help you to complete the reading responses as we cover the materials in class. Because they are intended as a study guide, I will generally collect responses only at the time of the quizzes and exams to which the particular responses apply. Responses completed after the relevant quizzes and exams will not be acknowledged.
9/01: introduction - lecture Origins of Civilization

TOPICS: Domestication of plants and animals (Neolithic age c. 7000 BCE) enabled permanent settlements in flooding river valleys -Tigris-Euphrates, Nile, Indus, Yangtze, Yucatan Peninsula, Mexico - earliest city-states - by 3500 BCE. Flooding control/irrigation requires specialization of labor and production and control of food surplus. Early city social systems were rigid and hierarchical, the leaders being priest/generals. These leaders claimed (or were granted) authority in order to deal with gods of rivers and weather thought to determine life. Differences in conditions/resources of valleys and behavior of their rivers is important in considering differences among these early civilizations. We are concerned with civilizations in the Tigris-Euphrates, Ur, (in Iraq) and lower Nile (in Egypt) - the Fertile Crescent.

View portfolio – fertile crescent, Ur & ziggurat, early irrigation agriculture & water moving.

9/3: discussion/lecture - From the Fertile Crescent to the Peloponnesian Peninsula (c.2000 - 800 BCE)

TOPICS - moving westward from the Tigris-Euphrates river valley. New approaches to unpredictability of nature(s forces - the Hebrews and a different concept of divinity and people(s relationship with the divinity. New approaches to inter-community communication - Phoenicians, traders and carriers of ideas and technologies, language development. New kinds of communities - Island civilization of Crete, Minoans at Knossos and Mycenean settlements on Peloponnesian peninsula, (1650 BCE). Contact, trade and conflict. Destruction of Knossos (a tsunami and other factors) - 1450 BCE. On the Peloponnesian peninsula, rise of Mycenaeans, invasions of the Dorans (c. 800 BCE). Inland retreat of Greek peoples and founding of early Peloponnesian mountain valley city-states.
