COURSE OVERVIEW

What is the role of America in a dynamic and changing world? What kind of historical events, domestic factors, and international influences have shaped its present foreign relations with the world? What are the transnational threats and challenges in the world it needs to address? The course on America and the World will cover the history and evolution of American foreign relations from the nation’s early years as a new republic through the 21st century, exploring factors that have shaped its foreign policy and relationship with the world, ways in which America has influenced the world—culturally, socially, economically and how different world events, rise of identity politics, globalization, transnational networks, and international organizations have in turn shaped its policies and perception of the world. The course is divided into three parts.

The first part deals with theoretical approaches, the historical context and key debates in the evolution of American foreign relations. We seek to ask the question if United States was an isolationist power or was it an empire in the making pursuing its power, profit, prestige and principles. The second part of the course discusses American foreign relations in the post Cold War era. It focuses on US pursuit of a policy of liberal hegemony and assesses failures and successes of American foreign relations. The third part of the course deals with US foreign relations since September 2001 and the major transnational threats it is faced with.

LEARNING OUTCOMES
- Student Specific: The course will help students focus and direct their efforts in examining history and evolution of American foreign relations since it attained its independence.

- Student Centered: Students are expected to complete all weekly readings and assignments to critically evaluate America’s role in the world.

- Observation and actionable: Students will be able to master and explore diverse streams of thought and economic and strategic interests that have shaped its foreign policy and relationship with the world and exploring and assessing international influences and actors that in turn impact American foreign relations.

- Developmental: The students will be able to comprehend and evaluate theoretical approaches to American foreign relations and apply them to current concerns and be able to create their own arguments and policy options when making sense of America’s contemporary policies and transnational security threats. Students will develop "critical-thinking and writing skills required for civic engagement in a democratic society and enables them to pursue careers in the public, non-profit, and private sectors or to pursue further study in political science, law, public service and administration, criminal justice, non-profit administration, global politics, and international relations." (Rutgers Political Science Website)

COURSE REQUIREMENT, ASSIGNMENTS AND GRADING

- All assignments: Group projects, weekly readings, slides and videos, research paper, mid-term and final exams are aligned to the course learning objectives and make the expected learning outcomes measurable.

- Attendance and Participation: Regular attendance and participation is required for all scheduled classes. Students must do the assigned readings and come to class with questions, and contribute to classroom discussions. Absence from classes will affect your grade.

- Group Projects: Students will work in groups they will be assigned to. For more details, check blackboard.

- Research Paper: This course requires you to write a short 5-page research paper. Very broadly the paper asks you to identify a region or a country, assess and analyze US foreign policy towards the country or region. The final paper is due for submission in blackboard on 04/26/18 by 11.59P.M. Late papers will not be accepted. A one paragraph written statement about the topic you wish to pursue is due by 02/20/18 in blackboard. All students must complete the first draft of their research paper by 03/27/18. Students will also do a peer review of each other's work in class on 03/27/18. Peer review sheet is posted in blackboard.

- Final Exam: The final exam will be administered during the time listed on the official Rutgers University final exam grid. The test will comprise of multiple choice questions, and short answers. The final exam is tentatively scheduled for Monday, May 7, 2018 at 11.45 and will comprise of 100 multiple choice questions including short answer questions. We will review for the final exam in class on 04/30/18

COURSE POLICIES

- Absence Policy: In accordance with University policy, students are expected to attend class every day with all relevant required course materials and work. If you are absent from class, contact me as soon as possible, preferably before the next class meeting. Students remain responsible for any missed work, for work completed in class, and for work due, and must arrange for that work to be delivered to the faculty on time. Per the university policy, absences are excused only in the case of illness, death in the family, religious observance, or official college business. These instances must be documented and approved in advance when the instance was foreseeable. Note: having an airline ticket to travel (unless it is for one of the documented reasons listed above) is not grounds for an excused absence.

- Blackboard: Please check the blackboard for readings and announcements.

- Completion of Requirements: You should complete ALL the requirements of the course. If you do not submit an assignment or appear for your presentation, you will automatically fail the course. If you foresee any problems with the timely submission of assignments and/or appearing for your presentations, you must notify me immediately. All assignments are due at the beginning of the class meeting.
• Make-Ups for Presentations and Examinations: Students who miss class on the date they were scheduled to make their presentation will not be able to make it up on another date, unless the absence was documented and excused in accordance with the university policy outlined above. Students will not be allowed to make up the mid-term or final exams on another date unless the absence was documented and excused in accordance with the university policy outlined above.

• Use of Electronic Devices: Please turn off all cell phones and personal electronic devices when you enter the classroom. You can use laptops, but only for taking notes. Note that your class participation grade will automatically drop to an F if you use your phone or laptop for a non-classroom related activity.

• Email Communication: Outside of the classroom, the primary method of communication will be via emails, sent either directly or via Blackboard. It is your responsibility as a student in this course to ensure that your Rutgers email ID is operational to receive my emails to you. Contact the Technology Help Desk immediately if you experience problems in receiving emails from me.

• Disruptive Student Behavior: Students who engage in any prohibited or unlawful behavior that results in disruption of class may be directed by the instructor to leave the class for the remainder of the class period. As a last resort, if a disruptive student refuses to leave the room, campus Public Safety will be contacted for assistance at 973-353-5581.

• Inclement Weather Policy: If classes are canceled due to inclement weather, students are responsible for checking their university email and/or Blackboard for information from their faculty advising them of any immediate impact on the students’ preparation for the next class meeting.

• Syllabus and Course Requirements: Finally, you are responsible for understanding and acting upon the contents and requirements of this syllabus. If you have any questions regarding any aspects of this syllabus, feel free to write or talk to me. Also, if you have questions or concerns regarding your performance in the course or on a project, I encourage you to schedule an appointment with me during my office hours. You can also seek academic support from the places mentioned below.
